To who it may concern,

It is beyond doubt that Microsoft has been judged to have systematically employed monopolistic and unfair business practices. By playing our legal system like a virtuoso, it has avoided any real harm to its core businesses and in fact has proven that it is better to break this law and pay what ever small price in order to gain momentum and market share. Microsoft is unchallenged and there is no end in sight.

Now Microsoft is going to be "giving" Windows XP to 12,000 of the nations's poorest schools. What a great ploy. Now these 12,000 schools will depend on Microsoft upgrades as well as train hundreds of thousands of future Microsoft consumers. Let's face it. Microsoft has won and owns us all. Please have the decency to stand up and add an asterisk to this sad chapter in American history.

Sincerely,

Ken Mendoza
